...which was the first time in the history of the city that the streets were so crowded with people. The crowd was so large that it was impossible to move through it without being pushed back. The people were of all ages and all colors, and they were all there to see the same thing. The crowd was so large that it was impossible to move through it without being pushed back. The people were of all ages and all colors, and they were all there to see the same thing.
